Sign-up for SCE Outage Alerts

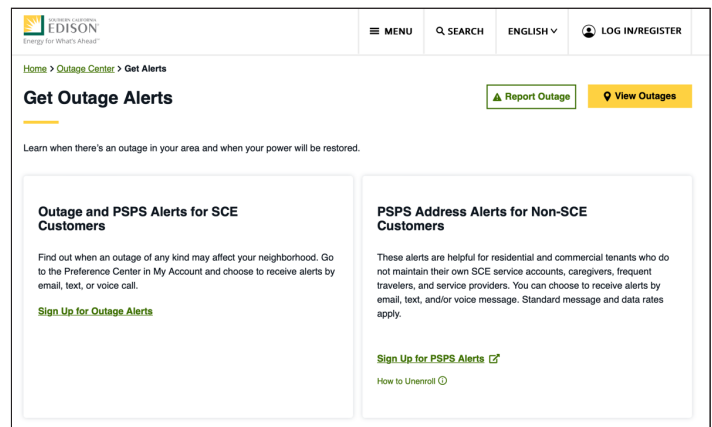

As construction moves forward, Southern California Edison (SCE) will conduct planned power outages, necessary to relocate their power lines underground. This undergrounding of utilities—made possible by the Ladyface Greenway Project—improves safety, enhances reliability, and helps protect utility lines from weather-related disruptions. While these outages are expected to occur between now and fall, SCE will notify customers of the specific dates and times. The Ladyface Greenway Team is not provided specifics due to safety protocols.

To find out when your power may be affected, we recommend signing up for outage alerts from Southern California Edison (SCE). These alerts will keep you informed with real-time updates via email, text, or phone—helping you stay prepared and minimize disruptions. In this notice, we'll walk you through the simple steps to sign up for these alerts.

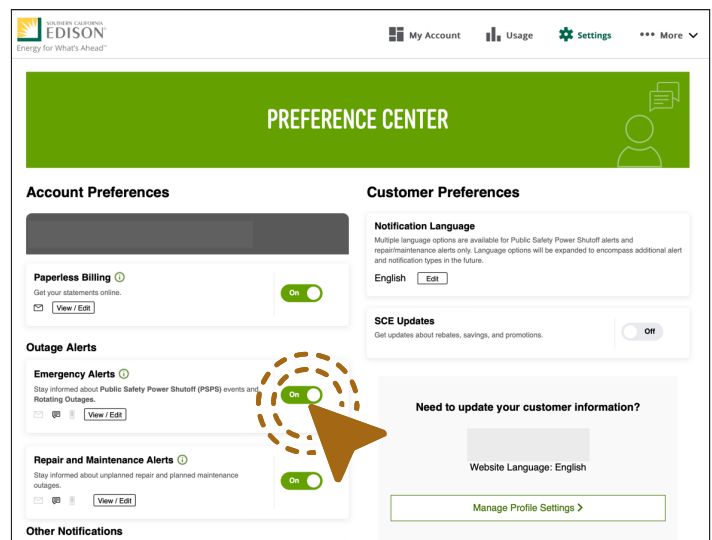

Steps

1. Visit www.sce.com/outage-center.
2. Click on "Get Alerts".
3. Sign up for outage alerts. Choose either:
